Sheryl’s passion is teaching young women to advocate for themselves and others, and pursue their dreams. She created a non-profit organization called Girls Advocating Leadership & Strength (GALS) to equip them with the tools they need for success. GALS participants have spearheaded e-commerce businesses, equality petitions, various clubs, and have even been featured on Michelle Obama’s Better Make Room Campaign. Sheryl also serves as the film-director for the Brooklyn Cultural Adventures Program (BCAP), which creates short videos on critical social issues, such as drug abuse, poverty, and gentrification. She has devoted over a thousand community service hours to helping those in need.
