Alexandria’s story starts when she was just six years old. A born leader, she started a non-profit called Rainbow Readers that provided interactive educational reading groups for underprivileged preschool children. At age eleven, Alexandria created her second non-profit, iElder. This organization enables senior citizens to remain in their homes and continue to live independent lives by providing them with technology help, pet care, and other kinds of daily assistance. In 2017, Alexandria launched her largest organization to date, The Human Projects. It is an international youth-run nonprofit dedicated to addressing human rights issues around the world. With 32 clubs and national chapters in 15 countries, The Human Projects has created campaigns of such magnitude that it has reached more than a million individuals in over one hundred countries.
