Erika lives with bipolar disorder and is not afraid to share this fact with others. She channels her advocacy into a platform which not only lets her own voice be heard, but the voices of her peers, as well. She developed, created, and executed an exhibition at the Philadelphia Photo Arts Center entitled, “More Than Your Words.” It includes photographs of various people; the hurtful words that have been said about them; and QR codes which allow us to hear these people describe the effect of these negative stereotypes in their own words. Erika’s goal in creating this work of art is to reroute the minds of both victims and abusers to spread love and joy. #letschangetheworld"
