An Update Regarding COVID-19 (Coronavirus)

Dear Friends of the NLM,

As the COVID-19 (Coronavirus) continues to impact people around the world, the National Liberty Museum is carefully monitoring information from the Centers for Disease Control (CDC), the World Health Organization (WHO), the Pennsylvania Department of Health and the Philadelphia Department of Public Health and will make decisions about continued operations based on their guidance.

As of now, the Museum is currently open to visitors during regular hours and will remain open unless we are advised otherwise by city, state, or federal agencies. If a pre-scheduled Museum event or program is canceled, the change will be indicated on our online calendar. We will also let pre-registered attendees know if/when the event is rescheduled.

To ensure a safe and healthy space for staff and visitors, the Museum is taking appropriate action. Our protocols include:

- Requesting staff and visitors stay home if they are sick, and not to return to the Museum until they are fever/symptom-free for a minimum of 24 hours
- Making sure our restrooms are accessible for frequent hand-washing and making hand sanitizer and cleansing wipes available for all employees and visitors
- Amplifying our procedures for daily cleaning of our facilities, including increasing cleaning of commonly touched surfaces, such as doorknobs, handles, and touchscreens

We encourage you to visit the CDC website for the most current guidance regarding the coronavirus and to learn more about everyday preventative measures. You can also find out the latest information regarding the City of Philadelphia here.

Thank you and please stay safe,
