These officers make a positive impact on young people by teaching them the game of chess.

They run a chess program at Saint Barnabas Catholic Grade School in Philadelphia. The officers teach the game to 7th and 8th graders twice a week throughout the entire school year.

They took members of their chess team to a citywide competition of 200 participants, and one of their students finished in 4th place!

Officers Montague and Smith work very hard to bridge the gap that exists between law enforcement and the community they serve.
