These officers were called to a home where an armed individual was waving a gun at another family member after a verbal altercation.

They took cover, drew their weapons, and repeatedly asked the gunman to show his hands, as most of his body was blocked from their view.

They kept a clear head when the gunman suddenly moved, which was a difficult but wise decision, because it turned out he was no longer holding the weapon.

They removed the family member who was being held against her will and then approached the assailant again. Officers Ceravolo and Morales were able to subdue and arrest the gunman without incident!