

NATIONAL LIBERTY MUSEUM

Dear Friend of the NLM,

It has been a trying year. A pandemic, far too many instances of racial injustice, and countless months of unrest have brought to light the fragility of liberty and democracy. With the guilty verdicts in the Derek Chauvin trial, we have finally received a semblance of closure on an episode of racial injustice that galvanized people across our nation. We stand in solidarity with George Floyd's family and friends, as well as with civic leaders and others, who are actively working to create justice and equality for all.

We applaud the courage of young hero Darnella Frazier, only 17 at the time, for her bravery and quick thinking in recording the now infamous video of the murder of George Floyd. It is heartening to see young leaders, emboldened with a strong desire to see a more fair and equitable society, stand up for what they believe is right. Through our work with students across the region, the National Liberty Museum has witnessed the powerful societal changes that come when young people are inspired to create positive change in their school, community, and the world.

As a nation, there is still much more work to be done, but the NLM remains resolute in our mission to inspire others to take positive action to protect the liberty of others. We will continue to promote opportunities for meaningful dialogue and to encourage others to continue to stand up for what is right.

Thank you for your continued support and for all you are doing to live like a hero by showing up, speaking out, and addressing inequality wherever you find it.

Gwen Borowsky, CEO